_X_ Endorse

ACOG endorsement of a peer organization’s clinical document denotes that ACOG fully supports the clinical guidance in the document. Clinical documents endorsed by ACOG are considered official ACOG clinical guidance. ACOG allows its name and/or logo to appear on documents it endorses subject to ACOG’s prior written approval of the form and placement of its logo (see below in “Acknowledgement”).

Expiration
This endorsement is effective as of October 2018 and will expire when the document is revised, withdrawn, or five years after publication, whichever comes first.

ACOG will review each endorsement every 18-24 months for reaffirmation or withdrawal if the endorsed document has not already been revised or withdrawn.

Acknowledgement
You may acknowledge ACOG’s endorsement of the document solely by including the following statement on the document: “Endorsed by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG), October 2018, and should be construed as ACOG clinical guidance.”

This endorsement will be listed on the October 2018 Obstetrics & Gynecology College publications breaker page (embargo lifts on September 24, 2018) and simultaneously listed on the ACOG website along with a link to the document on your website. This acknowledgement is not embargoed, but please align your promotion of ACOG’s endorsement with the embargo lift if possible.

ACOG hereby grants you permission to place the ACOG logo (as it appears below) on the document, provided that you obtain ACOG’s prior written approval of the form and placement of the logo. Prior to distribution of the document, you must submit the final document to ACOG for review and approval of the appearance of ACOG’s logo. ACOG will not approve any use of its logo on an endorsed or international supported document if ACOG’s logo is the only logo to appear on the document or if the use might suggest greater involvement by ACOG than is accurate, and ACOG may withhold its approval for any reason, in its sole discretion. If you do not obtain written approval from ACOG of the appearance of its logo on the document, then this permission to use ACOG’s logo is void.
