CERTIFICATION FOR CORRECTIONAL HEALTH PROFESSIONALS

Professional Recognition

Participation in NCCHC's Certified Correctional Health Professional program is an investment in your future that will give you a professional edge. Certification recognizes the mastery of national standards and the knowledge expected of leaders in this complex, specialized field. The CCHP credential is a symbol of achievement and leadership and is highly valued not only by participants but also by employers.

Correctional health professionals face unique challenges: working within strict security regulations, dealing with crowded facilities, understanding the complex legal and public health considerations of providing care to incarcerated populations and more. Achieving professional certification is the surest way to prove that you have the tools to meet these challenges.

Purpose

The purpose of the CCHP examination is to measure a candidate's knowledge, understanding and application of national standards and guidelines essential to the delivery of appropriate health care, the basic legal principles for practicing within a correctional health care system, the ethical obligations of correctional health professionals and the role of health care professionals in delivering care in the correctional environment. The examination does not measure clinical competency.

Eligibility

Professionals from many different disciplines and work settings have earned CCHP certification. All correctional health professionals are encouraged to apply. Eligibility requirements are as follows:

- Credentials appropriate to the applicant's field and employment position, and the requirements of the state in which the applicant is licensed. The credentials must be free of any restriction that would limit professional practice solely to the correctional setting. If a license or credential is not required for practice, then the credential is not required for certification.
- Good character and fitness. Character and fitness are one of the most important components of the application. An applicant's record of conduct should justify the trust of patients, employers and others.

Application and Candidacy

Elements of the application:

- Completed application and fee
- Resume or curriculum vitae documenting education and professional experience
- Copies of valid credentials, e.g., license, diploma (see Eligibility above)

For application deadlines for each exam, see www.ncchc.org/CCHP/calendar.
